New Faculty Hired For Cap College Campus

Capilano College has a fresh, new campus and has now hired five new, full-time faculty and a number of new part-time faculty. The five full-time people include: an Art Program Coordinator, two Biologists, a Geographer, and a Coordinator of the Mathematics Department. And there are new part-time people in most subject areas.

Ted Kingan, the College Art Program Coordinator, is no stranger to the North Shore. He spent the last seven years as Head of the Carson Graham Secondary School Art Department, and is a practising artist, having shown his paintings at numerous shows, both in Vancouver and in Eastern Canada.

Biologists William Gibson and Wayne Weber both have extensive backgrounds in their field. Bill Gibson has taught primarily in secondary schools, but went back to university to specialize in community college teaching. He may be remembered as having taught a course of Genetics at Capilano two years ago. Wayne Weber will be teaching for our Outdoor Recreation Program as well as for the Biology Department.

Karen Ewing is the new Geographer. She lists as her past occupations: weather observer, remote sensing & photo interpretation research for environmental studies, and free-lance cartographer. She is also active in winter outdoor activities such as hiking, skiing and winter camping.
